Message from the Secretary
Ministry of Energy and Natural Resources

A Salute to Dedication, Resilience, and Service

Today, on World Ranger Day, the Ministry of Energy and Natural Resources joins the global community in celebrating the unwavering spirit of our rangers, the backbone of Bhutan's environmental stewardship.

Conservation in Bhutan requires more than technical knowledge, it demands physical endurance, passion, and deep commitment. Day in and day out, our rangers navigate challenging terrain, brave unpredictable weather, and manage complex frontline conservation challenges to safeguard our rich biodiversity and national parks.

Beyond protection, our rangers act as bridge-builders. They educate local communities, respond to environmental emergencies, support ecological research, and ensure that our natural resource policies translate into meaningful action on the ground.

The Ministry remains steadfastly committed to empowering our ranger workforce with better equipment, enhanced training, and stronger institutional support to meet modern conservation challenges.

I express my heartfelt appreciation to every ranger in the field today. Thank you for your service, your resilience, and your dedication to keeping Bhutan green, wild, and resilient.

Tashi Delek and Happy World Ranger Day!
